The State of US Padel, 2026

The complete dataset behind the American padel boom. This edition was sent to you personally — quote any figure with attribution ("Source: Padel Courts Finder, State of US Padel 2026"), but please don't republish the report wholesale.

36

clubs in the pipeline

Every club, mapped

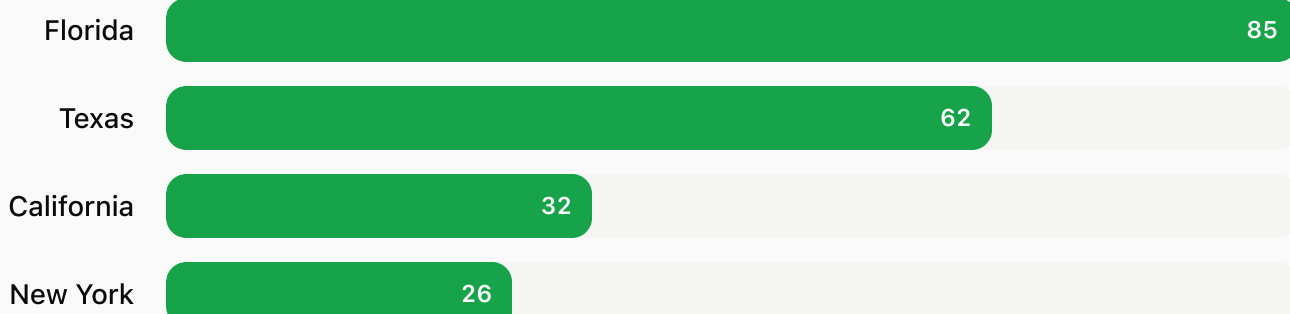

343+ clubs across 200+ cities. Each light is a listed club.

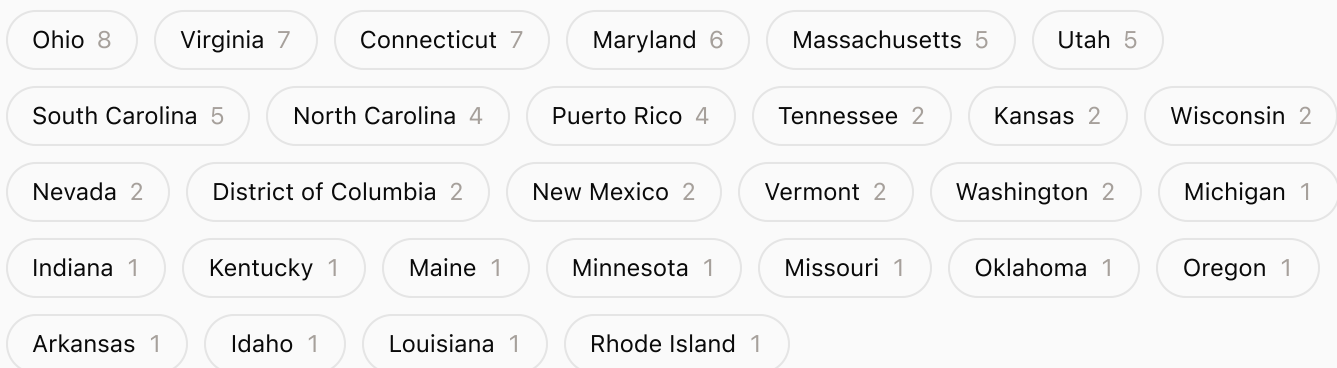

Where the clubs are

Florida and Texas account for 43% of all US padel clubs, and the concentration isn't an accident. Both states pair year-round outdoor weather with large Latin American and European communities who arrived already playing — Miami didn't need to be taught padel, it needed courts. Florida's 85 clubs make it, on its own, one of the densest padel markets outside Europe and Latin America.

The more interesting story is the long tail: 39 states now have at least one club, and the fastest relative growth is happening in places with no padel heritage at all — Utah, Ohio, the Carolinas — where a single ambitious operator can own an entire metro. That's the pattern we're seeing in America: the sport spreads club by club, not federation-down.

What an American padel club looks like

courts at the average club (of 318 clubs reporting court counts)

38%

of the 327 clubs with a known court type are fully indoor. 52% are outdoor-only, and 34 clubs (10%) run both indoor and outdoor courts

29

courts at the largest listed facility — Ultra Padel Club in Miami, FL

The typical American padel club is a small, purpose-built facility rather than a bolt-on to an existing racquet club — and the indoor share reflects how much of the sport's growth is happening in year-round climate-controlled venues rather than the outdoor courts common in Spain and Latin America. Indoor-first is a distinctly American adaptation: it makes padel viable in Chicago winters and Houston summers alike, and it turns clubs into the year-round social businesses — cafes, lounges, leagues, recovery rooms — that the industry's "third space" playbook calls for.

It also explains the economics. An indoor club is a real-estate play as much as a sports one — which is why the operators expanding fastest are chains signing warehouse leases, and why our construction cost data shows the building, not the court kit, dominating indoor budgets.

Where America plays: the top padel metros

Ranked by open courts rather than club count, the map of American padel is really a map of greater Miami: the city proper has 100 courts across 18 open clubs, and Doral and North Miami add 66more within a 20-minute drive. Below Miami, Texas's big three (Austin, Houston, San Antonio) and San Diego form the second tier, each at roughly 20 open courts — a fifth of Miami's supply in metros with two to four times its population.

#	Metro	Open clubs	Courts
1	Miami, FL	18	100
2	Austin, TX	5	45
3	Doral, FL	6	39
4	North Miami, FL	4	27
5	Brooklyn, NY	5	26
6	Houston, TX	8	25
7	San Antonio, TX	5	22
8	San Diego, CA	4	22
9	West Palm Beach, FL	4	21

#	Metro	Open clubs	Courts
10	Orlando, FL	6	20
11	Chicago, IL	5	19
12	Tucson, AZ	4	19

Open clubs only; court totals count every court a club reports. Suburbs are listed under their own city (Doral and North Miami are separate rows, not folded into Miami).

Padel as a business

$60

Club size

Most American padel is small-format: over half of clubs run three to five courts, and only a handful have hit the 10+ court scale common in Spain. Of 291 open clubs reporting court counts:

The chains

12 operators now run two or more locations, together 38 clubs — 11% of the directory. That is the market's clearest maturity signal: proven club models being replicated regionally.

Operator	Clubs	Courts	States
Padel Haus	7	41	CO, GA, NY, TN, TX
Taktika Padel	5	17	CA
Bay Padel	4	18	CA
Reserve Padel	3	21	FL
Padel39	3	21	TX
Park Padel	3	13	CA
Racket Social Club	3	13	CO, GA, TX
Sensa Padel	2	10	MA, TN

The unit economics explain the format. At the median $60 court-hour split four ways, padel costs a player about $15 an hour — boutique-fitness-class money — while a four-court club booking 8 paid hours a day per court grosses roughly $57,600 a month on court time alone before lessons, leagues, memberships, and food and drink. Our construction cost guide and court buyer's guide cover the capital side: $20–30k for an outdoor court kit, $40–75k installed, with the building dominating any indoor budget.

The pipeline: 36 clubs on the way

Announced or under-construction clubs our directory currently tracks span 17 states — a leading indicator of where the next wave lands. Read the list below like a heat map of operator confidence: multiple pipeline clubs in a single metro means someone has run the numbers on demand and liked them.

The pipeline also shows the market maturing from independents to chains — multi-location operators expanding along the Sun Belt and into second-tier metros, following the playbook Playtomic's report describes in Europe: prove the club model once, then replicate it regionally.

The padel deserts

Major US cities with no club in our directory within 25 miles of downtown — the clearest map of where the opportunity still sits for operators and investors. These are not small towns: each is a top-40 metro where, as far as our verified listings show, a padel-curious player has nowhere to play without a road trip. Know a club we're missing? Tell us and we'll verify and update this analysis.

If the USPA's own 10,000-courts-by-2030 projection is even half right, most of these cities get their first club within a couple of years — and in every market the sport has entered so far, the first mover became the community's default home court.

City	Nearest open club	In the pipeline
Memphis	~196 miles	none announced
Buffalo	~173 miles	none announced
Omaha	~172 miles	none announced
Birmingham	~128 miles	none announced
Jacksonville	~124 miles	Conquer Padel Jacksonville, Vamos Padel in build-out
Fresno	~120 miles	none announced
Virginia Beach	~93 miles	Padel Foundry in build-out
Albuquerque	~52 miles	none announced

Distances are straight-line from the city center to the nearest open club in our directory. "In the pipeline" lists announced clubs within 25 miles that haven't opened yet.

Padel in context: what the outside numbers say

Our directory is the supply side. Three independent sources describe the demand side and the money — and they agree on the direction, if not the exact count.

1.07M

Americans played padel in 2025, 238,000 of them eight or more times — the first year the sport was large enough for the Sports & Fitness Industry Association to track it (SFIA, 2026).

1,324 vs ~1,000

Our verified court count against the US Padel Association's "just over 1,000 courts across 31 states" (April 2026). We track 39 states; the gap is coverage, not disagreement — our directory includes clubs outside the USPA membership.

250 / 330

new US clubs and courts added in 2025, per the Playtomic x PwC Strategy& Global Padel Report 2026, which classes the US as a "Diamond in the Rough" market with growth concentrated in Florida, Texas, California, and select East Coast cities.

4.4%

padel's US participation as a share of pickleball's 24.3 million players (SFIA, 2026) — and our 1,324 padel courts are 1.6% of USA Pickleball's 82,613 known courts. That ratio is the whole investment thesis.

The money. The Pro Padel League raised a $15 million Series A in March 2026 led by Charlotte Hornets co-chairman Rick Schnall — $25 million in twelve months across ten franchises in the US, Canada, and Mexico, with a five-event 2026 season that includes the league's first Los Angeles stop (SportsPro; PPL). Operators are raising too: Epic Padel closed a $10 million seed round in September 2025 to open four to six clubs (GlobeNewswire), Racquet 360 closed $9 million in early 2026 (Athletech News), and Padel Haus — a $7.5 million Series A behind it — opened Denver in June 2026 with Dallas to follow as its seventh club (Padel Nation).

The pro game arrived. Premier Padel, the FIP-sanctioned world tour, played its first-ever US event at the Miami Beach Convention Center in March 2025 and returned in March 2026 with €479,068 in prize money — the FIP World Padel Report 2025 counts 35 million players and 77,300 courts across 150 nations, on a broader federation methodology than Playtomic's 19.4 million and 58,300.

The health case, honestly. Padel is high-intensity intermittent exercise, and the peer-reviewed literature is catching up: a 2025 survey of 457 recreational players in Physical Therapy in Sport found 36.5% sustained an injury in the prior year (2.81 per 1,000 playing hours, over half to the lower limb — age over 30 and less experience were risk factors), while an eight-week programme in untrained children improved strength and power measures (Journal of Functional Morphology and Kinesiology, 2025). We do not repeat the "59% lower cardiovascular mortality" line that circulates in padel marketing: it comes from racket-sport cohort studies that predate padel's rise.

Methodology & citing this data

Padel Courts Finder maintains the underlying directory continuously: club listings are compiled from club websites, owner submissions, and public sources, then verified before publication. Counts on this page are computed live from the directory, so figures update as new clubs open. Where a data point is unknown for a club (court counts, indoor/outdoor type), it is excluded from that statistic rather than estimated.

You're welcome to cite any figure with attribution and a link: "Source: Padel Courts Finder, State of US Padel 2026".
